UAH Greek pavilion dedicated

Thanks to some enterprising Greeks at UAH, the Sheriff's Boys Ranch in Danville has a new pavilion.

The Greeks worked for five years selling raffle tickets and holding parties to raise money for this project. It has been a long, hard process, but UAH's three sororities and four fraternities are finally seeing the results.

The Greeks raised $8,000 to have the pavilion built. They dedicated the building during the group's fifth annual boys' ranch trip to Danville Saturday.

J. D. Dejnozka, a local businessman and former Delta Chi at Southern Illinois University, helped start the drive for the boys' ranch five years ago. He got the idea from his business partner, Jim Reed, who is on the boys' ranch board of trustees.

Dejnozka suggested the Greeks raise money for the pavilion, and they immediately started to work on this project. "Any businessman needs to get involved with his community, and UAH is a part of our community," said Dejnozka. "I wanted to get the younger people involved with the boys' ranch to see how they'd react. This year we only had two weeks to raise the money instead of the usual six weeks. I think we fared pretty good. We raised $1,000."

The Greeks won their draw-out battle to raise enough money for the pavilion, but it is the young men at the boys' ranch who are the real winners.

"The boys' ranch takes in children who have been abandoned, abused or are on the road to juvenile delinquency," said Dejnozka. "It's their home if they decide to stay. The boys range in age from about five or six on up to college age. They're very lucky to be there.

"The ranch survives from month to month. Without donations from the public, the boys' ranch would not exist. It takes a lot of money to keep it going." Dejnozka added.

Thanks to the continued support of the UAH Greeks and Huntsville businessmen, the boys' ranch will keep going for several years to come.

Cable TV coming to housing

by Doroda Wegert

Cable television may become a new addition to on-campus housing, according to SGA President Mark S. Chandler.

Presently, cable television is not available to on-campus housing. This is due to the inability of UAH to pay an initial fee of $16,000 that Group W Cable would charge on-campus housing for the installation of cable services.

"What I'm trying to do is alleviate that initial charge," said Chandler.

According to Chandler, his first step in accomplishing this goal was to bring the issue to the attention of the City Council.

As a result, in its meeting on January 19, 1984, the City Council will decide whether or not to form a committee to regulate cable television. The committee would regulate the cable company by forming a resolution which states what the company can and cannot do.

Chandler added that UAH does not fit under the correct classification to receive cable services without the installation charge.

"What I want to do is get on that committee to assure that the type of wording that we need to fall under the classification will be on the resolution.

"I will need and would appreciate many students present at this meeting on Jan. 19 to support the ideas that I will present," said Chandler.

A&M Students Attend UAH

by David Rogers

Several A & M students will soon be coming to UAH to participate in a new degree program set up by their university, according to Jeffrey J. Bayer, Chairman of the UAH Department of Art and Art History.

A bachelor of science degree in commercial and advertising art is now being offered by Alabama A & M University through the cooperation of the Department of Art and Art History of UAH.

"The new program was approved late last spring and went into effect in the fall term," said Roy L. Meek, Dean of the School of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences. "It requires that roughly 30 hours of art classes be taken at UAH."

Proposal

The SGA Legislature recently voted to recommend that the editors of student publications, including the exponent, be appointed by the publications board rather than elected by the student body as had generally been the case in the past. A formalized version of the proposal will be brought under consideration of the Board in the very near future. The exponent urges approval of the proposal.

Space Museum seeks coop students

by Ann Davidson

Students are being sought now to coop with the Space Camp at the Space and Rocket Center.

"Openings are available not just for science students but for education students and those in the social sciences," said Kathleen Murphy, coordinator of the cooperative education department.

"Co-op students will be camp counselors," said Jean Graben, education coordinator of the Space Museum. "They will be role models for sixth, seventh and eighth grade students from all over the world. Last year students came from 46 states and five foreign countries," added Graben.

"Co-op students are trained new to coop with the Space Camp is for pay and will be offered during the spring, summer and fall quarters.

"The University thinks it's a good idea and the Space and Rocket Center thinks it is a good idea," said George Trummeyer, Co-op Director.

Students must register through the Co-op office. Appointments are being set up now. Those interested should call the Co-op office at 895-6741.

Whales now "Malcom X"

by Marilyn Coffey

This Friday night, at 9:30 in the Union, the SGA Cabaret Series brings back a band which, despite its seemingly careless approach to the success business, has endeared itself to the UAH community, and survived personnel changes that would have thrown any other band into a downward spin. We're talking about Nuke The Whales, now known as Malcom X.

It can be surmised from their name (at least their original name) that the attitude of this band is not particularly serious. They've no heavy-metal axes to grind, and they don't espouse any specifically new-wave philosophy or technique. They just want to have fun. For Phil Proctor, lead guitarist and vocalist for the band, that means playing his instrument.

"I can't stand new-wave," Proctor says. "The instruments aren't the same. They use a lot of synthesizers, and don't really need guitar. I wanna play guitar!"

Proctor, sometimes known as "The Doctor," though he generally dislikes being called that, is an ex-UAH student presently enrolled in art classes at Calhoun, and working at Camelot Music. In the recent past, when Nuke The Whales was fronted by lead singer Walter Berry, Proctor played devil's advocate on stage, mischievously taunting Berry, and verbally insulting the audience, who, of course, kept coming back for more.

Now that Berry's gone, and the band has formed anew as Malcom X around Proctor and Ken Crouch, the bass player, Proctor says he'll have to cut back on the insults, since he'll be fronting the band.

Let's hope this doesn't discourage any old Nuke The Whales fans who have grown to love the abusive treatment.

The new Malcom X consists of Proctor, Crouch, drummer Millburn Lemink, and guitarist Antony Sharp. For this Friday's performance only, there'll be another band (cont. on pg. 5)
Twilight Zone: The Movie is a tribute to Serling

by Glenn Wills

You're travelling through another dimension. A dimension not of sight and sound, but of mind. A journey into a wondrous land whose boundaries are that of imagination. Next stop, the Twilight Zone!

Since I was a fan of the original TV series back when it was prime time on CBS I couldn't wait to see this feature-length version. To start with, Twilight Zone: The Movie was already the subject of much bad publicity because of the death of Vic Morrow and two Vietnamese children during the shooting of the first segment.

As it seems, Morrow was carrying the children across a battlefield when an explosion from the ground sent debris up into the air and struck the rotor on the back of the filming helicopter. As a result, the helicopter lost control and crashed into Morrow and the children. (Needless to say, this footage was not in the movie.) In spite of this, they were able to splice together enough of the episode so that it makes sense.

The format of the movie is four short stories held together with the narration of Burgess Meredith.

The movie opens with Dan Ackroyd and Albert Brooks travelling down a lonely road at night. After the tape player dies they have to amuse themselves by guessing the theme songs from old TV shows (I still can't believe that Dan Ackroyd couldn't get the theme from National Geographic!) which of course is the perfect lead-in to the theme from The Twilight Zone, which is easily the most recognized theme song in TV history.

After discussion about the old Twilight Zone episodes and other things, we are thrust into Episode I which stars Vic Morrow and how he deals with prejudice. I think the ending is pretty drastic but fitting enough, I presume.

Episode II stars Scatman Crothers and is a remake (reCarothers and is a remake and rewrite) of an earlier Twilight Zone episode. It deals with growing old and the fountain of youth.

Episode III is the only original story and controls control of the will. The only way to describe this one is unusual. It stars Kathleen Quinlan and a guest appearance from Atari.

Episode IV is far and away the best of the four. I also vaguely remember this one from TV. It deals with the fear of flying and believe me, if flying is not one of your favorite things to do, this episode will cure you for good. All the elements are here to make this a perfectly awful experience. They should show this one on all long distance flights.

On second thought, it wouldn't be such a good idea after all. The cast of this last story are mostly no-names, but there is a cameo appearance by Rod Serling's wife, Carol. On the whole, I would say this movie, while not the best continued on page 5.
Clubs & Organizations

Compass Club
The Compass Club of UAH would like to announce their newest members. Initiated Sunday, January 8 were: Lori Beddington, Marianne Decher, Melissa Layne, Stacy Leonard, Sherron Rowe, Gaylia Townsley and Karen Yeager. We would also like to announce that we have a meeting on Tuesday, January 17 at 12:15 p.m. This will be in Morton Hall, Rm 300. We would like to encourage anyone, especially former Anchor and Key Club members, to join us.

PIKA
The active members of Pi Kappa Alpha would like to congratulate its newest initiates. Pledges who were initiated December 17 are David Thigpen, Greg Swanner, Kyle Hall, Cris Jackson, John Scott, Donnie Pannel, Daniel Campbell and Mike Rivamonte.

Congratulations also go out to our new little sisters of the Shield and Diamond. We are very proud of our little sisters and grateful for the support that they give us.

The Pikes will be having an old timers weekend in March for our alumni. The weekend will include a semi-formal reception at the Noojin House and a party at the Pike House.

It's been five years since we were chartered by our national fraternity, and we hope for many more good years to come.

Bible Class
If you want to make new friends and study the Bible, then Hillshoro Heights Baptist Church is for you. Attend this Sunday our college Bible Class at 9:30 a.m., meeting upstairs at the front entrance of sanctuary.

Kappa Alpha Psi
All parties interested in becoming a part of the few good men of Kappa Alpha Psi, please contact Eric Collins at 852-6400 or Bobby Johnson at 534-6011 as soon as possible.

Circle K
Are you tired of sitting around waiting for things to happen? Circle K can help. Circle K is the world's largest collegiate organization. It is composed of over 12,700 members from Jamaica to Canada and all points in between.

We, the members of Circle K, are dedicated to helping our community and people in need. In Alabama, Circle K helps the boys and girls clubs around the state, visits the elderly in nursing homes along with an adopt a grandparent program, works year round with special Olympics along with numerous other projects and social activities for our members.

Our nationwide project is to help the Muscular Dystrophy Association by raising money through events such as dart-n-thons, bowl-a-thons, car smashers, slave days and many others.

The UAH Circle K club meets Tuesdays at 12:15 p.m. in room 204 of the Union Building. We need your help to better serve our campus and the Huntsville community.

member—keyboard player John Steinberg. Steinberg was with Nuke The Whales at its inception a few years ago, but somehow got distracted by Phd work in physics at the University of Iowa.

Malcolm X plays sixties rock—that is, Beatles, Rolling Stones, The Who, and the like—and they play it in the original spirit. As "The Doctor" says, "The music shouldn't sound perfect. Even the Beatles made mistakes."

As Nuke The Whales, the band has been around. They've made friends at Auburn, Sewanee, and GenO's in Huntsville. They seem to inspire preppie/fraternity types into a frenzy. "I hope there's no slam-dancing this time," says Proctor. "It's OK if they kill each other, but not me."

Women seem drawn to Proctor, if any conclusion can be made from what is written on certain ladies' room walls. But he claims not to have cultivated their attention. "I didn't get into a rock and roll band to get girls," he says, "and so far, it's worked!"

STANLIEO'S

In speaking of the new Broadway production of The Glass Menagerie, Newsweek Magazine recently referred to the play as "a light that must be turned on again and again to help show us where we were and where we are." Although it seems as if everyone is all too familiar with the play, Anthony Argo, director of the University Playhouse's upcoming version says that the Tennessee Williams' work hasn't been performed in Huntsville by other than a high school group since 1971.

"I've always wanted to do this play," he says.

The cast is small—just four characters—which places a lot of responsibility on the members, but it's coming together, says Argo. "Each of them is suited for their part."

In UP's incarnation of the play, Lori Gill is Laura, the frail, shy, crippled girl; Molly Williams is her interfering mother, Amanda. Cliff Beach plays Laura's brother, Tom, the narrator of the play and a vehicle for Tennessee Williams' autobiographical expressions; Scott Turner plays Jim, the Gentleman Caller.

Assistant Director is Susan Gill, and Tricia Ellis and Joal Mullican are stage manager and assistant stage manager, respectively.

Costumes are being handled by Kate Miller, John Smith, and Fran Tomin, and props will be the responsibility of Amanda Kay, Mike Jensen, and Melissa Babcock.

The Glass Menagerie will be presented at the Von Braun Civic Center Playhouse on the evenings of Jan. 18, 19, 20 and 21. Show time is 8:15 p.m.

Although tickets are available at the VBCC box office for $5. for the general public, and $3. for non-UAH students, members of the UAH community can obtain free tickets at the information booth in Morton Hall, or at the VBCC box office on performance nights, as long as they have their UAH I.D.

Charger basketball wins conference opener

by Becky Akin

What would make a Southern States Conference opener against the biggest rivals and in front of the biggest crowd even more exciting?

A win would be appropriate and that is just what the UAH Men's Basketball team did. The Chargers defeated the Athens State Bears, 66-63 at Spragins Hall last Saturday night. The Chargers went into the game with a 5-9 record. This game broke the five-game losing streak the Chargers had been having.

The Bears were the first to score, but most of the game the Chargers dominated the scoreboard figures. At the half, the Chargers were ahead one to take a lead of 34-33. The Bears jumped ahead for only a little while, only to lose the lead by a nine point margin. The Chargers stayed ahead to win the game.

Don DeLoach led the Chargers by scoring 24 points. Ben Rhodes scored 18, while Charles Bates scored 13. Walter Thompson scored 8 points.

Intramural basketball

The intramural basketball schedule for the week of January 11-15 will be as follows:

In the Men's A League, the Whoredogs (A) go against Kappa Alpha Psi and the Vols against the BSU Men. These games will be Sunday, January 15 at 2:00 p.m.

In the Men's B League on Thursday, Jan. 12, the Knives vs the Blue Leers and the Vols vs ATO. These games are at 6:00 p.m. At 7:15 p.m. the UAH Soccer Team is up against the Physical Chemists and the Nomads will be against the A-Team. Continuing at 8:30, the Whoredogs play the Pikes and the SGA Team plays the Nets. On Sunday, January 15, starting at 5:00 p.m. the Knives tangle with the ATO's and the Vols with the Physical Chemists. At 6:30, BSU Men vs the Blue Icers and the Nomads vs the Nets. At 8:00 the Whoredogs meet with the A-Team and the SGA Team with the Pikes.

This week in the Women's League, on Sunday, January 15 at 3:30 the BSU Women are up against A Taste of Honey and the K I) Killers-White will be against Chi Omega.

Future games and their times will be announced in the exponent.

Chargers down Air Force

by Becky Akin

The UAH Charger Hockey team shot down the Air Force Academy by the score of 6-5 when they played in January at the Air Force Academy. Jon Jones was the first to score for the Chargers early in the first period. This score tied the game since Air Force had scored a minute earlier. After another Air Force goal, Charger Andy Gilbert tied the first period at 2-2. The Chargers did not score during the second period. During the third period Dave Wallenstein and Mike Finn gave the Chargers the lead. The Air Force soon tied the game but that did not bother the Chargers, because Brian Kelly, assisted by Jon Jones, scored the winning goal with three minutes left to play.

Going into a week's break, the Chargers stand at a 14-4 overall record. The Chargers will be back on January 20-21 to host Iowa State at the VBCC.
