Plea for puck preservation

By Jeff Carr, Sports Reporter

For the UAHuntsville hockey team, Oct. 12 is a very important day.

At 7 p.m., the Chargers take on Minnesota State, and while that is important, the big news is who will be in attendance. Coming to watch UAH play will be the representatives of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. Given that UAH is currently unaffiliated with any conference and plays a very rigorous schedule across the country, the Chargers welcome the chance to play in a division one conference.

Thankfully for UAH, there are a few factors in their favor. The WCHA will be undergoing a massive change in the next offseason. Schools that are affiliated with the Big Ten Conference in football, basketball, and other sports will be forming a hockey Big Ten where it was previously non-existent. Other teams are leaving the WCHA for different conferences leaving the Chargers with 10 teams and in need of a 10th. UAH could finally be a 10th that the WCHA is looking for, but a few things need to be cleared up before the WCHA considers incorporating them.

The number one issue is with the conference move would be travel. The WCHA nine teams will include two schools from Alabama, one from the northern panhandle of Michigan and one from California. The conference schedule out

Former UAHuntsville professor Mustafa Abushagur was discharged from his position as Libyan prime minister Oct. 7.

Dr. Mustafa Abushagur was thrown out by congress in a 125 to 44 vote with 17 abstaining, the prime minister was considered a political threat to Gadhafi’s movement. After only 25 days in office, Abushagur was discharged from his position as Libyan prime minister Oct. 7.

The prime minister was ousted due to failure to obtain a cabinet within the 25-day timeframe he was given by the legislature. Abushagur’s two attempts at forming a cabinet were each shot down by the Libyan legislature, which is composed of dozens of members, divided by tribes, towns and regions across the country.

The reason given for Abushagur’s first proposed cabinet was that there were too many career politicians from the last government which was thought to have been weak and corrupt. The second disagreement was attributed to the fact that those people Abushagur chose did not comprise a diverse enough list and there were too many unknown individuals who would hold key titles.

Despite the loss of his position, Abushagur said he respected the General National Congress’ decision, but he addressed the fact that there would be instability if officials did not hastily elect a new prime minister. He warned that should the government not elect a new

The Nook: Part 1
By David Vail, Staff Writer

If you have not yet tasted of or seen goodness in the bed of the living, a good place to start might be The Nook. Located not far from campus at 3005 Bob Wulan Ave., The Nook boasts a selection of over 450 different foods. Here are a few things I get to try.

Two Heated Ale - This fabulous Indian Pale Ale is brewed by Belle's Brewery in Kalamazoo, Michigan. It has an Alcohol by Volume rating of 7.0 percent. The color of this beer is a soft orange tint. The citrus and some hoppy aroma from the hops is magnificently refreshing, and the hops deliver a nice little punch of bitterness without being overly bitter as some IPAs can be. This may lend itself well to those who are not used to IPAs, being one of the more abrasive styles of beer.

Terrible Thriller - This film comes from Unifilm, located in Quebec, Canada. It is a film of strong strength and has an ABV of 10.5 percent. It's a name and description like that which intimidates you, don't you worry. Despite such a title, this may be the best beer I have ever had. The color of this one is a very dark brown, almost black. Like any good Belgian, there is a wealth of complexity behind what makes it good or bad. There is always a distinctive aroma from the true Belgian yeasts and malts, and the flavor is so different. It is smooth, rich and not too heavy. Its exports distinctive Belgian notes that are both mildly sweet from the yeast and mildly sour, and mildly dry from the yeasts, which are all in a category of their own. If you have a thing for Belgian beer, this may be the best beer I have ever had. Even worse, do not, it is worth a try!

End of Watch review
By Reggie Allen, Staff Writer

"End of Watch" is an action drama starring Jake Gyllenhaal, Michael Pena and Anna Kendrick. The film depicts the daily lives of Los Angeles Police Department officers Brian Taylor and Mike Zavala. The film was mediocre and the plot took way too long to get somewhere, even if one even considers it a plot. The cast was decent and the cinematography was all right.

The thing at fault in this movie was the plot, or lack thereof. The movie took way too long to reach the overall conflict. Like "Chernobyl," the sound footage plays on the stage very well, but it is still lacking solidity. The audience members go to see the film via the concerts that the cops were and other forms of technology. The plot shown for the first hour and forty minutes doesn't develop properly. It was the equivalent to watching vanilla clips and bloggers from "Cops." This also resulted in cheap and contrived development. The film spent way too much time on the protagonists and not enough time on the antagonists.

If you could go back in time and shoot Hitler as a baby, would you? I know, it sounds like a question but this is the heart of the novel's moral conundrum that "Looper" presents. Joseph Gordon-Levitt stars as the young Joe alongside Bruce Willis as the old Joe. Joe is part of a group of specialized assassins known simply as loopers. He is a professional for 20 years, at which time point time travel has not been invented. However, thirty years in the future, it has, and the mob has taken to sending men back in time to be murdered and disposed of by the loopers. The loopers are rewarded handsomely in silver, but there is a catch. Loopers are required to "close their loop." In other words their older self is sent back in time to be killed by themselves. They are being big paydays and are sent to a ride on the corn train. There is fun for all ages. The barn also offers milkings at the corrals. Be sure to enjoy the farm for a delicious film that is not filled with gore or lack thereof. The movie takes place in a near-future drug cartel and presents a perfect mix of groundbreaking content innocence and malice.

The Big Bang Theory
By Samuel Gibby, Staff Writer

"The Big Bang Theory" is the Emmy-winning sitcom surrounding four nerdy scientists. The show has been widely appreciated because of its appeal to nerds. In the season premiere, the show focused on the aftermath of Howard and Wolowitz going into space.

The problem with this premier was that it wasn't funny, with the exception of one or two jokes. This is a shame because it is the majority of last season, it was still not a very good episode.

Tate Farms
By Holly Shelton, Staff Writer

Tate Farms has become well known in North Alabama as a popular pumpkin farm. The farm was established in 1948 by Homer Tate and his family. The family began farming pumpkins only a few years ago, with 12 acres of pumpkins. The family raised their seasonal success, Tate Farms Cotton Pickin' Pumpkins, to meet the farm's principal crop. The business has seen tremendous growth, making Tate Farms a wonderful place to create family memories.

The pumpkin patch has nine grown to 60 acres of pumpkins and gourds and all sorts of colors, shapes and sizes. In my search, the perfect pumpkin picked a Brode D'Galeux Eysines. According to my research, this is a French heirloom pumpkin that was used in the movie "Looper." It was the equivalent to "Looper" in year 2042, at which time the movie takes place. The movie takes place in a near-future drug cartel and presents a perfect mix of groundbreaking content innocence and malice.
UAH vs UA

By Jeff Carr, Sports Writer

Guess what Charger deBruyn had one goal and three assists. Junior Casey Cofer finished the game with four assists, and the man of the night, Kyle Lysaght, scored five goals. Overall, the team showed great puck control with crisp passing and strong penalty kill by scoring two short-handed goals and allowing the fewest Alabama goals in the second period.

"For the most part, we executed the plan," Head Coach Kurt Korver said during a post-game interview. "This is about the process and when you focus on the process, watching the outcome is a hypertext of that." UAH jumped on Alabama early, rattling off six goals in the first period, and theComfort Zone, said that the goal was to keep the game from Alabama's momentary three-goal lead in the second period. As of Sept. 28, the lock-out for the referees employed by the NFL is over. The NFL and the referees have agreed on a new agreement between the league and its striped shirt-wearing employees that started before the beginning of this season.

During the week, both NFL and the NFLPA officials were in town. This week's games included three of the usual, refs. People were bought in from different levels of football. Some of them came from division three football and even some from a lingerie football league. Needless to say, the speed of the NFL proved to be challenging for the referees.

During the weeks that they refereed games, the referees made a name for themselves. "We all know referees, but he wanted us to be a referee," Sonny said to the sportswriters. "He knows he's going to be a referee, but he wanted us to be a referee," Sonny said.

The Chargers beat the Georgia Southern 19-0 in the second period after UAH extended their lead to 19-0. The UAHuntersville backhander loosened a Hall Mary pass to the end zone. The result of the play was a called touchdown but seemingly every NFL official disagreed with the call. Upon review, the wide receiver that supposedly made the catch was an opposing player in the back. Had the call made the call, the play would have been voided. Another clear mistake made by the referee placement is the end of a simultaneous catch. When looking at the replay, it can be seen that the receiver missed the ball. But the referee then accepted the ball and called it a touchdown. Under NFL rules, the call should have been an incomplete pass.

It goes without saying that everyone except for the league is glad the actual refs are back.

UAH Volleyball
By Sara McMahan, Sports Reporter

The University of Alabama's volleyball team has hit a slump after defeating the University of North Alabama Oct. 2 for the first time in over a decade.

The UAH volleyball team has fallen short to South Carolina-Aiken and Montevallo after taking down their Gulf South Conference rivals, UNA. Defeating UNA was a crowning moment for the Chargers. This was the first victory since 1999, ending a 29 game losing streak to the Lions. The Chargers beat the Lions 3-1, led by junior Stacy Sargent, who rallied to win the first set with back-to-back kills and finished the match with a team high of 17 digs, closely followed by Angela Thurmond with 14 digs. Leading the game in assists was UAH's Kelly Wilson with 27. The Lady Chargers pulled through to not only have a confidence boost for the program but also for the 2012 season.

Although the win over UNA was big, the confidence did not translate into Thursday's game taking a tough 0-3 loss to Shorter. The Chargers were led by the same three stand-outs from the UNA game. Stacy Sargent had a team high of 13 digs. Angela Thurmond led the team with 13 kills and Kelly Wilson led the team in assists with 19.

The Chargers got no slack Saturday as they faced off against South Carolina-Aiken and Montevallo. USC-Aiken came out on top 2-3. Even though UAH put up a tough fight, USC-Aiken managed to get ahead and stay there for the final set, Montevallo put up tough competition for the Chargers later Saturday afternoon winning 2-1. Thurmond and Wilson were standouts the entire afternoon, leading the team in kills and assists in both games.

The Charger volleyball team will see the court again Oct. 12 at 7 p.m. at Springfield Hall on the UAH campus. With the home court advantage in their GSC game against Valdosta State, they need the support of fans. They will also see West Florida Oct. 14 at 1 p.m. on their home court. Both games will be full of energy and excitement in two important GSC games. Come out and support the Chargers as they continue to work for a Gulf South Conference Championship.
President Obama enjoys blaming the Bush administration for many of his budget problems over the last four years. Nobody is arguing that the President did not face office during difficult economic times, but what does he take responsibility for the last four years? Obama promised to cut the budget deficit in half by the end of his first term, knowing the country was in the midst of economic trouble. The budget deficit in 2009 was approximately 1.4 trillion. In order for Obama to keep his promise, the deficit for fiscal year 2012 would have to be about $700 billion. The Congressional Budget Office issued a report on Oct. 5, 2012 that estimates the 2012 deficit to be $1.1 trillion. Clearly President Obama broke his promise of reducing government spending by cutting the deficit in half. It is also clear that Congress has no confidence in the President’s financial management abilities. Obama’s proposed 2013 budget will not receive any votes in either house of Congress.

Gov. Mitt Romney has experience reforming spending mishaps. He has righted failing businesses in the private sector. When Olympic officials were experiencing problems in Utah because of careless budget management, whom did they call to help? Mitt Romney. Romney’s plan to address federal spending is quite different than the president’s. Throughout his campaign, Romney has advocated for simpler smaller government. Some of his goals to reduce spending are the following: cap government spending at 20 percent of Gross Domestic Product, which was 24.3 percent last year; cut non-security discretionary spending by five percent across the board; reduce waste and fraud spending and streamline government programs to cut administrative costs and improve results. Unlike President Obama, Gov. Romney believes the government should stop spending money it does not have at the expense of the American people.

The next four years will be crucial in deciding our country’s financial stability. Would you rather have a former community organizer who cannot even convince his own party to vote for a budget leading the country for the next four years? Or a proven businessman who has experience in turning around irresponsible spending? The choice is clear.

A Denial of Academia and Its Tenets
By Adam, Guest Columnist

Here we are, college students, immersed in what we have been told to do. The great new American reform, “graduate high school, indent yourself to get a college education, get a good job and help us regenerate the economy,” has become a logical and valid way of thinking for many students. The great gurus of many, blind, isolated and lonely successful Americans have turned the perpetuator of such notions as “successful” Americans must overwhelm ourselves with the right information and think for ourselves through this life and the next, an attitude that our President did not successfully defeat while in the realm of politics under the guise of a “truce.” Life does move in circles, it tells stories that cannot possibly be written or defined. It touches us all in ways that no academic discipline could ever prepare us for.

Demia can be defined as a refusal to accept or trust the system. You need to be careful of what we accept as “true.” Academia would have us believe that your LIFE is reduced to our education. We are told from an early age in this society that our education should be our first priority. If we blindly follow our prior generation’s example of Baby Boomers, then we may very well believe the lie that tells us we are defined as humans beings by our job and our Western educations. This will always well us short.

We are more than our thoughts and we are more than our jobs and we are more than we have been told in our education system. No university can teach us how to be our selves, no lecture or journal article can instruct us how to serve ourselves. There is something lacking in our world and we know it in our souls. We have been systematically trained to suppress such feelings and think more about what we want to be and how we are going to “survive” in the “real world.” I am asking you all to stop thinking so much and at the very least quit letting others dictate how you think.

Details of LIFE are just the first detail. They are not LIFE. A college education and its tenets are just the first detail. They are not the only way to be successful. We need to learn how to adapt to the future and not just the future of one week and then invent life we knew for many, blind, isolated and lonely successful Americans have turned the perpetuator of such notions as “successful” Americans must overwhelm ourselves with the right information and think for ourselves through this life and the next, an attitude that our President did not successfully defeat while in the realm of politics under the guise of a “truce.” Life does move in circles, it tells stories that cannot possibly be written or defined.
