M. Lee Newman, UAH student and creator of the Ordinary Heroes comic strip featured in the Exponent, was killed in an auto accident Thursday morning.

Newman, 21, on his way to work at the Johnson Research Center, was driving a car which was struck head-on by a vehicle near his home in Petersburg, TN. According to reports, the vehicle crossed the center line of the highway.

He had been a student at UAH since Fall 1988, after graduating from Lincoln County High in May of that year. An Electrical Engineering major who was reported to have been changing to Computer Science, Newman worked in the Center for Automation and Robotics at JRC. He had been employed there since April of 1990.

Ordinary Heroes, Newman's comic strip, premiered in the Exponent in February of this year.

In addition to his work at JRC and his contributions to the exponent, Newman was a member of both the Wind Ensemble and the Pep Band at UAH.

The family requests that in lieu of flowers, donations should be made to UAH in Newman's honor.

A Memorial

by Cathy Smith

Wednesday night, I said goodbye to one of my best friends. I did not realize it would be for the last time.

Thursday morning, Lee Newman was killed in a car wreck. I have been given this opportunity to write a memorial for him. The only way I know how to do this is to share my memories.

This morning, as I walked into the music building, I peeked into the lobby out of habit. Rather than the familiar "Hello there," I was met with silence. The chairs remained empty as I tried to wish you back into your familiar place. I sat there and remembered.

Has it really been only a year and a half that we've sat here growing a friendship? We must have sat here for hours laughing about life. And how often did you sit here listening to my problems? How often did I sit here, enthralled by your description of a new science fiction book you were reading? And what about our long sessions planning our own book? Lee, I never really realized how much you contributed to my life.

I ever realized just exactly what a wonderful person you were. Lee, you were intelligent, imaginative, as well as talented. You were not just talented with paper and ink. You were talented with people. More than a promising individual, you were a kind and caring friend.

I never got to say thank you, Lee. Thank you, Lee. You were and will always remain my Ordinarv Hero.

Ordinary Heroes

by M. Lee Newman

This is the only remaining finished episode of Ordinary Heroes, M. Lee Newman's original comic strip. The exponent thanks the folks in "The Zoo" for giving us access to it.
Sewanee Mediaeval Colloquium

On April 3 and 4, the Sewanee Mediaeval Colloquium took place at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tennessee. Seventy students from U.A.H. attended this conference as well as faculty members Dr. Carol Farr, who presented a paper entitled "The Celtic Hero and the 'Arrest' Scene in the Book of Kells", and Dr. Richard Gerberding, who commented on a paper by Martin A. Clausen, (Kalamazoo College) entitled "Early Carolingian Biblical Interpretation: Chrodegang of Metz and the Regula Canonicorum". Twelve students from Phi Alpha Theta (History Honor Society) and the History Club attended the conference. Along with taking in the aesthetic qualities of the campus and its architecture, the people attending the conference were treated to first-class scholarship on Barbarian Europe and Its Legacy. Reknown scholars in Mediaeval History presented papers on a broad spectrum of the history, art history, and literature of Barbarian Europe. Professor Henry Mayr-Harting of Oxford University in England, and a recent guest speaker here on UAH's campus, delivered two Plenary Session lectures, as did Dr. Fred Robinson of Yale University.

Most students who attended the Colloquium came away with a new sense of this period of mediaeval history, along with a glimmer of the vast body of knowledge that awaits them as they choose to pursue their own agendas in an academic context.

Second Annual PRCA Portfolio Workshop a Success

by Cynthia R. Green
for the exponent

On Friday, April 17, the UAH Student Chapter of the Public Relations Council of Alabama held its second annual Portfolio Workshop. Professionals, students and faculty participated in the workshop. This year’s focus was on the job search; speakers provided useful tips on the do’s and don’ts of interviewing.

The workshop opened at 12:30 for check-in and registration, then Ms. Peri Widener of Boeung welcomed the exhibitors, speakers and attendees. Ms. Widener stressed the importance of becoming a member of an organization, such as PRCA, because of the valuable networking possibilities offered by the various members. Professionals are a vital link for students about to finish their higher education who will then be looking for their niche in the job market.

Ms. Lisa Henderson of Manpower Temporary Services was the next speaker. She emphasized that the job search should not be limited to one avenue of information but should include your College Placement Office as well as the State Employment Office, Temporary Services, and even the want ads in newspapers.

For resume submissions, Ms. Henderson suggested always following up with a letter just as you would if you had already received the interview. And then, of course, after the interview, send a thank you letter. Other useful tips included the fact that some companies will not look at a resume that has been folded; to be on the safe side, always use a large, business size manilla envelope to mail your resume.

Concerning salary questions, Ms. Henderson pointed out that you should research the position for which you are applying. Check out similar positions with other companies and see what the average salary range is. Then be prepared to state your expectations when asked. If the going salary for a position is within the range of $20,000 to $25,000, then you should start out with the $25,000. The company will know what they plan on offering, you just have to be within their range. Never undersell yourself, but do not ask for a salary that is too far above the competitive range.

Attendees viewed exhibitor portfolios during a break between speakers. Exhibitors included Rick Mould of UAH University Relations, Elaine Frederickson of the UAH Communications Department, Craig Dunn of the Space and Rocket Center, John Wessel of The Huntsville Times, Carole Malon of the UAH Division of Continuing Medical Education, Brian Ames of Boeing, George Winters of South Central Bell, Janet Martin of Calhoun, Dana Staples of Intergraph, and student portfolios of Rita Graham, Cynthia R. Green, and Carolyn Life.

Mr. Johnny Richards, the Manager of College and University Relations at Intergraph rounded out the day. He spoke about the resume itself as well as the interviewing process. Your resume should be one page, if possible, but must definitely be free of spelling or grammatical errors. You should highlight areas relevant to the position for which you are applying and should make the order chronological instead of subjective.

If you have a good GPA put it on the resume. The object of the resume is to sell yourself; the interview is a two-way street. You have to make the prospective employer know what you can do for them just as they have to let you know what they can do for you. Be prepared to answer—and ask—a few tough questions. Research the company and find out if they can offer what you are looking for. Places to look for information about a company include the CPPO on campus, the Chamber of Commerce who has a book of information on all surrounding businesses and industries, and even financial wizards such as Meryl Lynch can show you how well the company is doing.

Another key component is not to apply for a job which your credentials will not support. You may be wasting your time just as you are most certainly wasting the time of the company.

Mr. Richards also suggested that you always have a transcript with you when you interview, just in case they ask to see it. This will save a lot of time and may make the difference in getting the job you want. Also, try to interview before 2:00 p.m. The later in the afternoon, the less the interviewer may be thinking about you—he wants to get home too, 9:00 a.m. seems to be the best time for interviews simply because everyone is fresher and ready to start the day.

You must decide if the company is right for you. Review your facts before the interview, then call and confirm the exact time of the interview the day before it is scheduled. During the interview, remember that the interviewer is as much under observation as you are. He can tell a lot about the company by his mannerisms and attitudes; this may help you make that important decision.

The Portfolio Workshop has been implemented by the UAH PRCA as a means to provide important information about the professional world to future professionals. It is a great resource for information gathering as well as making important professional contacts. And sometimes, even though no-one wants to admit it, it still comes down to who you know rather than what you know.

GIVE US TIME TO REPAY YOUR LOAN.

After just three years in the Army, your college loan could be a thing of the past. Under the Army's Loan Repayment program, each year you serve on active duty reduces your indebtedness by one-third or $1,500, whichever amount is greater.

Faculty Senate Meeting

The Faculty Senate meeting was held on Thursday, April 9, at the Nursing building. Mary Lynne Dittmar called the meeting to order at 12:35pm.

First, the Draft minutes of meeting #312 were approved as amended. Next, the senate committee reports were discussed. The senate is waiting for a compromise response from Provost Yost regarding academic withdrawal and bankruptcy. A faculty resource fair is being planned and also a letter is sent to Provost Yost regarding a new core curriculum.

Next, the report of the Provost/Vice-president for academic affairs was discussed. The Provost applauds interaction of Senate committees and Administration. It was known that the Deans support bankruptcy bill so it will move along. The retroactive withdrawal and course repeat policies is still under consideration.

The Provost has also received numerous faculty inputs regarding streamlining forms and procedures. He is forwarding faculty and teaching awards criteria to President Franz, and is also meeting with ACHE to discuss information items that have become action items.

Under other business, the third reading of the Senate Bill 227 took place. Dr. Williamson reported that we do and pass does not preclude anyone from taking legal action. Dr. Bower pointed out that Section (g) should be called Time Limit for Faculty Grievance. Section (g) states that, "The petition filing for the grievance to be brought before the FAC shall be made within two calendar years from the initial action causing the grievance, or within one calendar year of the faculty member leaving the employment of the employment of the university, whichever comes first."

Soon after, the question was called. There were 35 for the bill with no opposition. The Senate Bill 227 became the Senate Resolution 91/92-6.

Lastly, the second reading of Senate Bill 229 took place. At first, the amendment to the amended bill failed. Further discussion ensued regarding the timeliness of offers. Dr. McCalister accepted a friendly amendment that was proposed by Dr. Bower removing certain words in the amended bill. Question was called and there were 27 for, 9 opposed, and 1 abstention. The amended bill now replaced the original senate bill. When motion to table was made and seconded to call the question, there were 25 for the bill with 5 against and 1 abstention. The Senate Bill 229 passed into third reading.

President Paul adjourned the meeting at 2:00pm.

UAH Amateur Radio Association Reestablished

by Kent Darzi
for the exponent

For the past four years, U.A.H. has been the only university in Alabama without an amateur radio club. With the SGA’s approval of the club last quarter, the UAH Amateur Radio Association (UAH ARA) is now trying to be one of the most active groups in the state.

Amateur Radio has been a service helping local communities. Whether providing radio communication for local events or contacting friends and family overseas, amateur radio has given the general public the means of electronic communication. Today, with amateur satellites, computers, solid state electronics, and high speed networks, amateur radio has taken the ingenuity of engineers and scientists and made amateur radio into a technological playground.

How can the UAH ARA benefit me?

The UAH ARA is a community organization that would like to provide a helping hand whenever possible. Some of the activities planned for this year include:

- Kenwood K.I.D.S. - a program sponsored by Kenwood USA that helps middle and high school students obtain their FCC license.
- ARRL Radiogram - provides a way of sending messages around the world, much like a telegram.
- Support for local events - help keep radio contact for community activities such as marathons, contests, etc.
- Having fun - in your spare time you can pick up the mike and talk to another person on the other side of town or across the world.

The UAH ARA needs your support.

Since we are still a new organization, we face the same obstacles as with any newly founded club. Primarily, increasing the membership of the club and obtaining equipment.

If you have ever been interested in amateur radio now is the best time to get licensed. Anyone can get an FCC license and Morse code is not required to get on the air. We are trying to provide books and equipment so that students can enjoy ham radio without major expense.

Since the UAH ARA is a non-profit organization, we rely a lot on equipment being donated. If you have any equipment that you could part with, it would give students a way of getting on the air.

When does the UAH ARA meet?
The UAH ARA generally holds its meetings the first and third Wednesday of the month at 8:15 PM. Currently we are meeting in room 273 of the Engineering Building. Stop by and see what we’re up to.
SGA Passes Two Bills

by scott hinckley
staff

The SGA did not obtain quorum this week until after 9:30 pm. Once the required 2/3 of the legislators arrived the meeting went quickly.

While waiting on members, SGA President Doug Jones began his discussion. Jones discussed the recent meeting between the SGA and the school administration regarding the possible GPA calculation changes. The impression given was that the policy has a high chance of being approved. More than 1,000 students have signed petitions to voice their opinion that the policy should be changed.

Two house bills were passed which formalized some of the SGA operating procedures. (see right and below)

The College of Nursing requested $500 towards an upcoming ceremony. They have been asked to resubmit the gift request with a breakdown of their costs and fundraising efforts.

The Choice of the Current Generation

With his left hand, he spins the cylinder he has dubbed Fortuna. Before it completely stops, he jerks the cylinder back into place. His thumb cocks the gun, and the sound is slow, portentous, deafening. His middle finger tightens around the trigger. He is not hesitant, but deliberate. Mechanically, he raises the barrel to her temple. She can tremble and plead, stoop and pray; or speak and persuade. Ultimately, she can merely wait until the trigger is pulled.

Black love and white hate is a violent metaphor from an advocate of pacifism! Because it explains how I feel as a woman whose right to choose is being threatened, I feel as though the courts are playing Russian roulette with women's lives. We've taken a few flesh wounds lately in Mississippi and Utah. Their legislatures have passed highly restrictive abortion bills. Also, only one operational abortion clinic is left in the state of Montana.

Now, pressure is building as cases are making their way to the Supreme Court. Will Roe vs. Wade be overturned? Pro-life advocates are highly mobilized, and pro-choice advocates are responding. These parking lot battles are all too familiar scenes on the nightly news. One merely needs to look at the average fetus or a coat-hanger, and ideologies are evoked.

What is new, is lately, is the proliferation of stories about women bracing for the bullet. There is talk of underground railroads and how to escape. Operation Rescue's response: "It sounds unsual and unsanitary, I don't think many women would do it."

News flash pro-lifers: Labor is unsafe and unsanitary.

These preparations for illegal abortion, although necessary, make me shudder. I'm still not prepared for government workers making me of a fundamental right — the right to control my own body. You may not think it's moral of me to be that way, but you can't carry the child for me; you can't deliver it; and you can't wear my glasses, even if you are the male who had sex with me. Because you are not me. Why should you be allowed to make my decisions? I have a cerebral cortex, I have specific circumstances. And I have to make my own moral decisions.

News flash #2: Your morality and the law are not always in direct correlation.

Now for something extremely unpopular. A fetus is a life. A fertilized ovum is, at the very least, the potential for life. Yes, an unborn child has the right to life; but, women are not incubators. The right of the woman to control her body supersedes the child's right to life. Here's why: If the state, instead of working to legally determine women's bodily functions, then women are enslaved. They are slaves to their bodies and the state.

Once I read about the journey of African women into slavery. Often, their captors would rape them early in the journey because a pregnant slave fetched a higher price. Their slavery was three-folds. They were slaves to whites, to black men, and to their own bodies.

Theoretically, now, we recognize that one's race does not determine degree of humanity or the rights earned by virtue of being human. But we are still struggling with the notion of "woman's" right to use the law makes a play to call this game, "How many rights can we deny female humans and justify it using the myth of biology."

Why should only women, merely by a biological lottery, be subject to incarceration for having sex? To jail a husband partner along with her seems ludicrous, right? After all, he didn't make the decision to have an abortion.

Exactly! It wasn’t his to make. Listen, pro-lifers. Preach abstinence, birth control, and adoption. Provide funds for pre- and post-natatal care. I would support such measures for prevention or for the empowerment of women, but I cannot condone these measures to add to women's list of choices. But, never, never, never take away my ultimate right to choose.

The 1992 Presidential election is only a half year away. One should think that the main focus would be on the Republicans or Democratic Candidates. This election, the American people are looking past the "big two" to an outsider named H. Ross Perot. The American people are so frustrated with the system that they are willing to look somewhere else for leadership. Because of this thirst for leadership, the people are blind on Perot's record.

Perot, a billionaire, has no right to put down the system that made him rich. Perot should be thankful to the system. I am very suspicious of the reasons why he is a capital war. That is the reason for the Gulf War was to protect the kingdom of Kuwait with a virgin every Thursday night. Wake up, Mr. Perot! The war was fought to keep the free flow of oil at an accepted market price. Wake up, Perot! If the war was not fought, the American economy would be in disaster. And your company would be in worse shape than it is today.

Mr. Perot wants the people to get involved in governmental operations. He wants the average man to vote on key issues concerning national security. Come on, Mr. Perot! Would you let your average employee make a very important decision concerning your billion dollar company? Mr. Perot, the government of the United States is not a democracy. Its framers did not make it a democracy, because they knew that the average man does not have the ability to be a leader. In order for a nation to be strong, it must have a leader. Not every man is blessed with leadership. So Mr. Perot, so named "electronic town hall" work. Think about it, you would feel safe at home if the average idiot on the street has a say in national security matters? Mr. Perot, Man needs a leader. And not every man can be one. There is too much ignorance out there for every man to be a leader.

Mr. Perot thinks that the United States government is a business. Wake up, Perot! Congress is not your average board of directors. They do not follow your orders. Every employee on your board like your board at Perot Electronics.

Going back to the "town hall", I am very suspicious about it. I do not want the people to get together in a big hall and push some buttons to vote on key issues concerning my well being. The United States government, Mr. Perot, is not a bingo game. One more thing, if the "town hall" is to be held, who will build in Stop for a second and think about it. Who is going to profit from this? Of course, Mr. Perot himself. He is the one with the computer company.

The American people should stop being blind about Perot. They should realize that he has no real agenda. All he is doing is taking advantage of the system that made him rich. And the people are getting caught up in his act because of their hunger for new leadership. The people should force the "big two" to start focusing on the issues. Why jump from the frying pan into open fire?
"Enough is enough indeed!"

To The Editor:

You are absolutely right, Mr. Argert: Enough IS Enough! Enough of you ultra-sensitive, self-righteous types have read certain sections of the exponent enough times to realize that you will, from time to time, run across material which will be offensive (challenging?) enough to cause you to ...What? Stop reading those sections, so that you will not be offended? Apparently not. To what then? To write in and objectively offer alternative viewpoints? Wrong again.

Enough is enough indeed! I have heard enough whining from self-proclaimed arbiters of morality to make me want to reinstate Roman-style crucifixion. I have had enough of people who not only close their minds to any but one view, but who further have the gall to try and rid literature and other mediums of expression of ideas which run counter to their own.

It is tempting, but I will refrain from accepting your generous invitation to ridicule you, I will, however, say this: I have thoroughly examined the scriptural account of your Lord's life, and I cannot help but scoff. I suppose that I just do not get it, huh? Maybe, just maybe, YOU do not get it. So what should I do? Start a campaign to rid the world of Bibles because I find their content utterly ridiculous and (yes) offensive? Again, it is tempting, but hardly fair.

Look: Walt Gatheie is not trying to offend anybody - any more than your alleged savior was trying to offend me. What he is doing, rather, is exercising his right to assert his own view. You have the right to ignore that view. You even have the right to disagree with that view. But you do NOT have the right to ask that anybody retract their assertions of particular views on the grounds that you find those views offensive (or on any grounds, for that matter!)

Your Lord abhored hypocrisy. I wonder what he would say if he found you claiming certain rights for yourself while, at the same time, demanding that others surrender those very same rights. Hmmmmmm ........

Sincerely,
Theodore Sturdy

"The last thing Huntsville needs is another dinosaur on the airwaves."

To the editors:

Many have complained about the dismal state of Huntsville radio but until recently no one in the community has tried to do anything about it. Still, it is a sign of desperation to petition the FCC to allow a local relay station for Nashville's 103KDF. The last thing Huntsville needs is another dinosaur on the airwaves.

The 1980's and 90's have been exciting times for pop music. Much of the new music has been generated in the South. Look at Atlanta, Nashville, Austin, Chapel Hill NC, Athens GA. As usual, Alabama lags behind. With a few low-power exceptions, stations in this state have continued to hurl out safe, unimaginative, oldies-laden music programming. In the Huntsville/Decatur area alone, at least three "rock" stations are clogged by the "classic rock" format.

Can anything be done to open up the playlists? Probably not on the commercial end of the dial. Nervous station managers will tell you they need to make money and the best way to do that is to continue playing the music of the large and aging baby-boom population. Okay. But it's quite possible that today's broadcast establishment is showing signs of the same narrow-mindedness they rebelled against so many years ago.

And then, there's the curious case of UAH's WLRH (89.3 FM). They carry National Public Radio. Fine, they play a lot of classical music. Also fine. A town this size needs such an outlet. But does anyone know a good reason why they see fit to devote a substantial chunk of weekend air time to essentially duplicating commercial formats by playing...oldies?

Slavish devotion to everything new is as pointless as ignoring anything new. But most Alabama radio listeners have had little opportunity to even hear the new. Perhaps it's time to put a bug in someone's earphones. WLRH may be the place to start.

Sincerely,
Corry Smith
