SGA Petition supports Chinese students

As of June 10, 1989, the UAH Student Government Association--Legislature established its position of supporting the United States government's policy toward democracy. The position of the Legislature was secured by the establishment of the “American Citizens Support for the Chinese Student Movement Committee” and the passage of Voice Resolution 9005.

The committee was established to help in the wording of signatures to the “American Citizens Support For Chinese government.” The SGA petition recognized the desire among citizens of that nation for democratic reforms within that government, the support of this movement by students at UAH, and the lack of democratic reforms directed by the Chinese government. However, he reiterated that the SGA does not advocate United States military intervention in China as a potential resolution.

Registration fees, procedures change

Koger said that Padulo has "eliminated the Change of Course Fee for those students who participate in early registration and then add or drop a course prior to open registration. These changes were proposed by an Ad Hoc Registration Committee formed by the President." The committee consisted of Koger, John Smith, acting vice president for Finance, and Gene Garrett, bursar.

According to Koger, early registration for the fall term will be from July 24 through August 3. The new registration fee will be $20. Students who receive incomplete courses may add courses on August 24, from 9 a.m. until noon. Students may add or drop courses between 1 and 4 p.m.

There will be no fee for adding or dropping courses until open registration begins September 14. After this date, there will be a $20 fee for adding or dropping a course. There will also be a $20 late fee for registration after September 15.

Koger said another reason students may wish to participate in early registration is that open registration for fall will be on a priority basis. Graduate students and seniors may register September 14 from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. Juniors may register from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m., and sophomores from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m. and non-degree students may register September 15 from noon until 6 p.m.

parents need to do if their baby seems to be having problems or is at identified risk of SIDS, coping with loss of an infant from SIDS, and the use of home monitors.

Knight's seminar on "Sudden Infant Death Syndrome" is part of the Prescription For Health free public lecture series presented on the third Tuesday of each month by the faculty of the UAH School of Primary Medical Care.

Michael Marshall, a respiratory therapist with Southern Medical Equipment Company, will discuss and demonstrate the use of home monitors for babies who have been diagnosed as being at risk for SIDS.

Ellen Knaur, R.N., will discuss "Resolve Through Sharing," a perinatal bereavement program at Huntsville Hospital, and other support resources for parents in the North Alabama region who have lost an infant from SIDS. Knaur is coordinator of Resolve Through Sharing and also coordinator of Huntsville Hospital's childbirth education programs.

The seminars are held in the UAH Clinical Science Center Lecture Hall, at Governors Drive and Gallatin Street, across from Huntsville Hospital. The parking lot is entered from Gallatin Street. Please phone the UAH School of Primary Medical Care Communications Office at 895-4424 for more information.

Blum appointed student representative to Board

The UAH Student Government Association president announced the appointment of Paul Blum as the student representative to the University of Alabama School System Board of Trustees for the 1988-1990 school year.

Blum returned to his position of last year, with experience commended by members of the Board. He will be taking his past experience and knowledge back to the Board of Trustees meeting in September and throughout the remainder of the academic year.

Forum to discuss the role of technology in society

A public affairs forum, entitled "Space, Technology, and Society," will be presented Thursday, July 13, in the Roberts Hall Recital Hall. "Technological frontiers and human integrity" is the theme of the forum, which will take place from 7:30 until 9 p.m. Dr. Langdon Winner and Dr. Roger Keenet will present this forum, with Dr. Dan Roehowiak, of the UAH philosophy program, moderating.

From Winner's research on the relationship between technology and society came the path-breaking study entitled "Autonomous Technology: Tech (out-of-control) as a theme in political thought." Winner is currently chairman of the Society for Philosophy and Technology. He teaches at the Polytech Institute in Troy, NY.

Keenet is currently a professor of political science at the University of Illinois — Urbana-Champaign. His area of specialization is Soviet foreign and domestic policy. He has written several books on Soviet-East European politics.

After the formal presentations, there will be a question-and-answer session, followed by a reception. For more information, please contact Dr. John Pottinger, coordinator of the forum, at 895-6013 or call the Political Science Department at 895-6112.

"People don't die for a piece of cloth..."

by Larissa Thomason
columnist

Recently, the Supreme Court ruled that laws against desecration of the American flag are unconstitutional and that burning the flag is a protected form of political speech. Finally, in this dismal term, the Justices have gotten something right. Senator Edward Dirksen, a Republican, said it: "People don't die for a piece of cloth..."

Amending the Constitution with an anti-flag burning amendment would change us for the worse. For the first time in American history, burning limits on the flag are once again legal. First Amendment guarantee of free speech by protecting only that speech which is acceptable to the majority of Americans. The argument that flag-burning is an action, not speech, is just not valid. Writing a controversial novel is also an action, not the dictionary definition of "speech." Should that fact be used to justify a picketing list used to spark an action, not speech, per se. Does that mean we can ban demonstrations of any kind on a whim? Once we limit one kind of speech, where does it stop?

America's politicians have seized on the issue and unleashed a whirlwind of demagoguery and chest-pounding rhetoric. We're told to say our crocodile tears for the flag. Such talk about respect for the flag and patriotism is meaningless. It comes from the group whose members, almost to a person, use the flag shamelessly during every football campaign to further their own political ends.

I don't just mean the Republicans either, though they are the principal offenders. Visit any political rally and there are enough American flags to clothe every politician in the world. Our flag is used as a political tool in every election and is being used now. That is the real desecration.

Amending the Constitution for this issue is perhaps the politic thing to do, but is not wise. Free speech is still limited when it would provoke panic among groups or cause them to believe they are endangered or provoked to riot. If a flag-burning is conducted under any of these conditions, the perpetrators can be sent to jail, but to send people to jail just because we don't like what they say is contrary to everything we profess to believe.

We were taught in our history, and men and women died or were wounded. It is surprising to see veterans' groups among the most vocal critics of the decision. Over and over we hear that "men fought and died for the flag." Get real.

"Americans seem willing to do anything..."

by David H. Rogers
guest columnist

"I don't intend to grow old. I intend to fight it every step of the way."

All I turn off her TV with the remote control, picks up her car keys and heads out the door. Before she leaves, she passes through her health club, she has to drop by the grocery store for a bag of 'lite' potato chips and a six-pack of Diet Coke. She then heads home to turn on her doctor soon to refill her Retin-A prescription.

America's obsession with looking youthful and physically perfect has reached new levels - or new depths, if you prefer. Earlier this year, two national corporations made the news with their plans to market foods made with "fake" fat, pending approval from the Food and Drug Administration. One of the companies, Proctor and Gamble, intends to use Olestra, its fat substitute product, in a variety of foods, from potato chips to baked goods.

What is disturbing about this news is the lack of reaction from the public. In the artificial ear of negativity that surrounds fake foods, Americans don't seem to be finding anything peculiar or bizarre about scientists bending the rules of nature so that we can eat the same unhealthful kinds of foods without all of the negative consequences. But perhaps a blase attitude should be expected. After all, some Americans seem willing to do anything these days to possess the image of youth and beauty, no matter what the cost.

Not happy with your eye color? Try Monoidil, hair transplants, or the ever-available toupee. Skin too pale for your liking? Fry it in a tanning bed or love it, or whatever. Instead of exercising and following a sensible low-fat diet, buy "fake foods, starve yourself on a liquid diet, have your stomach stapled, or just ask your local cosmetic surgeon to rearrange areas.

Television has taken more than its share of blame for the far-ranging ills of the nation, but the tube has a lot to do with our obsession with looking good. Commercial after commercial bombards the viewer with images of young, sexy people.

The message is clear: beauty is all important. These people are attractive and happy - buy our product and you will be, too.

More and more, commercials not actually selling grooming products are using sexuality to sell the product. From cars to Coke, and from dry beer to vacuum cleaners, the allure of physical beauty works its dubious magic.

What is really ironic is the fact that the very act of overwhelming promotes physical beauty and fitness is a major cause of the lack of physical fitness among Americans. A convincing sign of Americans' regression from being doers to being spectators is the popularity of televised football and basketball games.

Many it's just a coincidence, but it seems as though the guy most knowledgeable about sports has the largest gut.

With all this bad news, there is some good news. Many fitness experts believe the fitness craze among Americans is an excellent sign of the times. Maybe it's true. Perhaps we are on the verge of a national health care plan. People are ethnically conscious, perhaps the politic thing to do, but is not wise. Free speech is still limited when it would provoke panic among groups or cause them to believe they are endangered or provoked to riot. If a flag-burning is conducted under any of these conditions, the perpetrators can be sent to jail, but to send people to jail just because we don't like what they say is contrary to everything we profess to believe.

We were taught in our history, and men and women died or were wounded. It is surprising to see veterans' groups among the most vocal critics of the decision. Over and over we hear that "men fought and died for the flag." Get real.

Thank you for your correspondence...
“The entire world has cried out...at the...events in China...”

by Gregory Castle
columnist

The proper role of government in society has been an ongoing debate for thousands of years. There was a time when government was nothing more than an instrument of oppression that allowed the wealthy and powerful to demand obedience from those it considered its subjects. But over the centuries, people began to object to this concept of government. People began to get the notion that government existed at the behest of the people, not for the benefit of the monarch. It was only recently that citizens began to cry out for the protection and care of the citizens. There was a great deal of confusion about the role of government and the thought that a benevolent monarch would be the best protector of the people. But in the end, most nations decided that the government should be the protector of the people. This is how the notion of democracy was born.

But even under democracy, there is debate about the “proper” role of government. Some people think that a government should be authoritarian, stipulating rules and regulations and prohibiting — I guess they figure that this benefits the citizens in some way. Others believe that the government should simply protect the people from external threats and make sure that the rights of the citizens are protected, and, other than that, should just leave everyone alone. I don’t support either of these two views. The first is too dependent on the citizens, and the second seems far too narrow to be effective. The way I see it, the government is the servant of the people. Its job is to protect the people from any threat (foreign or domestic) and to see that the citizens can live in safety and tranquility so they can concentrate on being citizens. The government, like any servant, must listen to the demands of the people and respond to them.

This ruling doesn’t directly affect our lives. Very, very few people will ever have the urge to go out on a public street and burn the American flag. In my opinion, it is a way for people to show their anger. Many people are afraid when they even contemplate flag-burning. It conjures up images of thousands of burned books and crucifixes of Irish Catholics, of burning the U.S. “Great Satan.” However, we must never let this point “offensive” be synonymous for “illegal.”

Amending the Constitution is one of the most important steps ever taken by our elected officials. It is not something to be done lightly or in an effort to please one’s constituents. It is not something to be done in the moment of passion. I would like to leave you with a positive direction. Thus, after much soul-searching, I have decided to leave the University. I undertake this action with a great deal of disapproval and continuing concern for the future of campus housing at UAH.

I have spoken out as an advocate for the concerns of UAH students and for reasonable decision-making processes at our University. It appears, however, that I am powerless to work for changing this pattern of behavior in a positive direction. Thus, after much soul-searching, I have decided to leave the University. I undertake this action with a great deal of disapproval and continuing concern for the future of campus housing at UAH.

I am resigned to the fact that a government should be able to stand up to any insult. My flag can stand up to any insult. The Congress and 48 of the 50 states have passed laws making it a crime to burn the flag. These laws were originally enacted to protect me, my flag, that a man like Dan Quayle, a member of Congress, could never be killed by U.S. armed forces (such as in Vietnam) and never be persecuted for his or her political, religious, or philosophical beliefs (such as the McCarthy witch-hunts) and peaceful student demonstrators could never be killed by U.S. armed forces (such as in the Tiananmen massacre). The American flag is above committing such repression. And if demonstrators gathered in Washington, D.C. and demanded that the United States become communist, we know that our government would listen to their demands and react promptly and be best to respond to them. And there is no way that those protesters would be repulsed and arrested like any other group. It is the burden of the free, the nation of democracy, “We the People,” and all our children.

Well, OK, America isn’t perfect. And neither is any other country for that matter. And I guess we really have to respect that the Chinese government did it by and let the people get their way (what do those people think China is, a People’s Republic of something?). But that doesn’t mean we have to approve of what has happened in China. In fact, every peace-loving human being should condemn this barbarism. But we should turn our outrage into a force for good. Remember, our government is our servant. Let’s get together and tell our government that the American people won’t tolerate this sort of violation of human rights. As our servant, the United States government should do everything possible to ensure that the government of China lives up to its promise. Our government should also take action to protect Chinese students studying here in the United States.

I wish you and UAH peace.

For those of you who want to express your feelings far better than my own words:

You say the little efforts that I make to tip the housing scale
Where justice hangs in balance
I don’t think I ever thought they
To be able to stand up to being imprisoned
And I’m told, by those who have no real
I wish you and UAH peace.

To the Editor:

Why is it so hard for people to understand that our flag’s greatest strength is that it protects not only our people but all people. To say that our flag should be protected as it is, but also the occasional fool who would spit on it or burn it. Our flag and the rights it stands for needs so much, why I say, should be protected from insult.

Letter From the Governor

As many of you have heard, I have resigned my position as Director of Housing, effective June 19. After more than five years in this position, such a decision was very difficult for me to make.

I am deeply and intensely for UAH and for the welfare of all students, especially those students who believe Housing exists to accommodate students so that you are better able to pursue your studies.

During my tenure as Director, I have been committed to the ideals of excellence, fairness, personal responsibility, open communication and integrity in all dealings with students.

Unfortunately, during the past several months, the highest level of decision-making at the University has been committed to the ideals of excellence, fairness, personal responsibility, open communication and integrity in all dealings with students.

I wish you and UAH peace.

Thank you,
Jack Kephart

People from all over the United States and would have done it whether we had a flag or not. People don’t die in vain. And we must make sure that this sort of thing could never happen here in America. We are a country that is free, the nation of democracy, “We the People,” and all our children.

I have asked some of my legislative floor leaders to join me in the passing of this resolution. They are Representatives Seth Hammett and Bob McKee, and Senators Larry Dixon and Gerald Dial. They will co-sponsor this resolution in the next legislative session. That resolution will be introduced next January and it will
... passing a constitutional amendment to ban the burning or desecration of the American flag.
The citizens of this country are guaranteed the right of free speech.
That is a precious privilege that you and I must always protect.
But burning the American flag has nothing to do with free speech. If someone wants to protest, they can do it in another way. The American flag is a unique symbol of this country. It is a symbol of our great heritage. The flag should be protected by the law, not abused by it.

Lance Kirby doesn’t let handicap stop his campus life

by Carol Ann Vaughn
features reporter

Lance Kirby is a sophomore at UAH. He has not yet declared a major because he says there are too many subjects that he likes. One of his favorite subjects is people.

“I’m a person person. I like to talk to people and discuss things with them,” he said. Anyone who has ever met Lance realizes this right away. No one ever leaves a conversation with him feeling like a stranger.

In 1987, when he was 7 years old, Lance underwent chemotherapy for a brain tumor. In 1971, he received radiation treatments for a tumor located on his spine. Although successful, the treatments damaged Lance’s spine and, as a result, he has been in a wheelchair ever since. He moved with his parents, with whom he is very close, from Ohio to Texas before finally settling in Huntsville. He enjoys living on his own and currently resides in university housing where he has lived for almost a year and a half. He also drives his own van, which is a necessity on a campus as spread out as UAH.

UAH offers free tutoring

by Pat Newcomb
features reporter

As mid-terms loom ahead, some students may feel that they could use a little help in their classes. One way to get that help is through a free tutoring program offered by UAH.

All students registered at UAH are entitled to the program, which offers tutoring in “most undergraduate courses at the freshman and sophomore levels,” said Dr. Gary Biller, director of Student Development Services.

Many different types of students currently take advantage of the program. Many already have good grade point averages and the program serves as an additional means for maintaining their grades, said Biller. Other students have varying degrees of problems with which they need help. The tutors work either with individuals or in group sessions depending on the tutor and the subject.

The courses tutored range from math, physics, and other sciences, to English, psychology, history, and other humanities. Though some specific classes may not have a tutor, the program will always attempt to find a tutor for a student who needs help.

Anyone wishing to obtain a tutor should go by the Student Development Office in the University Center, Room 113, and fill out the form requesting a tutor. There is no charge to the student for the service.

American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics

The UAH student branch of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics held a meeting on June 29 to elect officers for the 1989-90 academic year. Announcement policy

All clubs and organizations' announcements must be kept to 150 words or less. This is to allow room for all announcements. Clubs and organizations are not prohibited from exceeding the 150-word limit, however. The Exponent cannot guarantee that all of the announcement will be published. We will make every effort to include all of the announcements not exceeding the 150-word limit. The editor has final approval of all announcements in regards to length, newsworthiness, questionable content, and poor taste.

Clubs and organizations are permitted to submit photos to accompany announcements; however, the photos will be printed on a space-available basis. All photos should contain the following information: name of club submitting photo, names of all individuals in photo, photo credit, if photo can be cropped, if photo needs to be returned, and if the photo can be printed at a later date as soon as space becomes available.

We will make every effort to return photos, but unmarked photos will not be returned.

At the discretion of the editor, due to space considerations an announcement may be moved from the 'pulse' campus events and happenings page to an appropriate news, features, or sports page. If this becomes necessary, an Exponent representative will try to notify the club submitting the article. All announcements must be typed and double-spaced, or must be neatly handwritten and double-spaced.

Clubs and organizations should take extra care in spelling as well as in neatness when including people's names in announcements. In addition, submissions must contain the name and phone number of a contact person who can be reached between Friday at 5 p.m. and Monday at noon in case we have any questions.
