Breaking Bad

By Nicholas Neely

After nearly a year of television screens, Breaking Bad returns to AMC to air the remainder of its fifth and final season, wrapping up a show many critics consider to be the best drama series in television history.

The premiere's cold open begins just as last year's premiere episode began. Another glimpse of Walter White's future reveals the White family home abandoned, deserted, and roped off by police with the name HEISENBERG spray painted on the living room wall.

The episode, titled "Blood Money," begins Walter's eventual fall with his secret life as a manufacturer of meth. The episode concludes with the episode movie at a slow clip. Premiers often have this feel as a result of moving characters and the plot points into place for the season's planned arc. As a fan of the show, I was entranced as plot points into place for the moving characters and the plot points into place for the season's planned arc.

Snowden seeking asylum

By Nicholas Neely

It was a scorching summer for U.S. intelligence with NSA leaker Edward Snowden gaining refuge in Russia and Army intelligence analyst Bradley Manning convicted of providing classified material to WikiLeaks.

Snowden's flight occupied headlines over the summer after he leaked classified intelligence about the clandestine program PRISM which logs electronic data and traffic to detect terrorist communication. Snowden had access to the classified material as a contract employee of the NSA. Snowden released the information while in Hong Kong. After failed attempts to extradite Snowden to the U.S. for prosecution and fleeing to Russia, the U.S. State Department revoked his passport. Snowden finally arrived for U.S. intelligence with NSA access to the classified material he released, including "the information while in Hong Kong." Snowden finally arrived in Russia and was granted asylum.

Snowden "has basically alerted people who are familiar with the NSA's capabilities to what techniques we have been using to monitor digital traffic. Under the law, intelligence agencies cannot spy domestically on citizens without a FISA court warrant, but there are few restrictions on spying abroad. Many claim Snowden's disclosures harm security by telling enemies how the U.S. monitors their chatter. Snowden's flight is a result of his lawyers and the Russian government. Snowden's disclosures harm security by telling enemies how the U.S. monitors their chatter. Snowden's flight is a result of his lawyers and the Russian government.

Snowden himself has helped widely used by terrorist cells because of its reputation for encryption; however, since Snowden's leaks many terrorists have stopped using it. In response to al-Qaeda's abrupt change in communicating, Sen. Angus King said "the biggest challenge for this year's is rebuffing terrorists," Coach Watts said in a recent interview, "the players and among the community. Watts inherits, in essence, a brand new team. Of the 24 players, 12 are freshmen. If the Chargers are to be successful on the pitch, they need to be a cohesive unit. "That's been one of the main points in camp for the boys: making sure that they are encouraging to each other, uplifting their teammates. We also have meals together in an effort to come together off the pitch," Watts said. Continued on page 3

New season, new soccer

By Jeff Carr

To say that the UAHuntsville men's soccer team is turning over a new leaf would be an understatement. The 2012 campaign saw many bitter disappointments, including a 10-0 drubbing at Montevallo. Readies to say, a revival of the program was needed. Enter new head coach Matt Watts.

"The biggest challenge for this team is reviving morale," Coach Watts said in a recent interview, "the players and among the community." Watts inherits, in essence, a brand new team. Big goals and small steps

By Sara McMahan

As the UAHuntsville women's soccer team prepares for the new season, small steps will help the Chargers accomplish big goals in 2013. The Lady Chargers kicked off the season last Saturday on the road at Carson Newman, and prepare to look off Gulf South Conference play this weekend at the University of West Georgia. The Chargers plan to look at the season one game at a time, particularly conference competitions. Playing in what is possibly one of the most competitive conferences, Head Coach Jerri Mitchell looks at each game as an opportunity to do something special. The Chargers' ultimate goal is a berth in the NCAA tournament. To do so, Mitchell plans to train to a high level every day to do so.

To help those in need. Dr. William Setzer, the Chair of Chemistry and Engineering, who in 2012 produced four shutdowns, matching the program record, recorded 122 news, and saved per game (0.49). Gunnarsdottir and Junior Alix Stott will be key in leading the defense for the Chargers. In midfield, Freshman Maddie Mannor, and up front Sophomore Sydney Floos and Junior Janae Petersmann, will play key roles for the Chargers as well. Florida played a big role for the Chargers in 2012 with 26 wins winning goals and was second on the team in points (13) and goals (8). Even though the Chargers will face tough competitors throughout their schedule, their biggest challenge may very well come in October. The Chargers will face the University of West Florida and Lee University. UWF won the National Championship in 2012 and will have an older and more experienced team with 14 out of 23 being junior and seniors. Lee became a part of the GSC conference this year and brings tough competition as well. Lee has won four out of the last six NAC titles. Just two teams out of the GSC the Chargers will have to face to achieve their desired berth to the NCAA Tournament. Mitchell believes "If you win our conference you are definitely a contender for the National Championship," which is exactly what the Chargers need to do.

The Chargers will be traveling this Friday to the University of West Georgia and on Sunday to Valdosta State. The next home game will be Tuesday Sept. 17 against the University of Montevallo.

Elections in Germany: How will things continue?

By Megan Roman

White most of us eagerly await the first day of fall on Sept. 21, 2013, our home and abroad anticipate an important day. The voting day, the election of a new Bundestag, the lower House of the German Parliament. While most elections go without much attention, this year, the election of a new Bundestag will have a direct impact on everything from what business is allowed to what taxes are collected.

The election system differs from the American system. The party that receives the most votes from Germany's citizens forms the government. Most of the time, however, no party receives enough votes to govern alone. Often, two parties must form a coalition. Experts suspect that this will happen again this year, with a coalition of CDU/CSU and FDP. Bündnis 90/Die Grünen and SPD, or the SPD and Die Linke for the SPD, would like to be in the German elections matter. Germany is a pioneer in the automobile and biochemistry industries. Showing interest to what happens overseas obviously pays off.

"Togetherness will give the new team a strong base," said Charger fans.

Though the team has improved, the past few seasons have wasted some chances that I feel like we could have scored on." Charger fans can put their trust in Watts. He knows a thing or two about demanding conditions. "I've had the privileges to learn from some of the best coaches. In England, excellence is not only expected, it's demanded day-in and day-out. I bring that same mentality to our boys here."

Defensively, we're strong. I have confidence in our boys at the back. Our attacking side of the field, the attacking side of the ball could use a little work. Snowden and Manning have created divisions in public discourse. Many label them as criminals for revealing state secrets, which both admitted to doing, and point out Snowden's hypocrisy for claiming to be a champion of civil liberties, but filing a lawsuit against the U.S. government for revealing how the U.S. collects information.

Seeking asylum
Former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden is believed to have sent asylum requests to 21 countries, including several in Europe, such as Germany, Poland, Switzerland and Austria.

Snowden, who worked as a contractor for the National Security Agency, said he was responsible for leaking the details of a top-secret surveillance program. The program, he said, allows the U.S. government to collect data on American citizens without a warrant or other legal requirements.

THE CHARGER TIMES
Review from the Archives with Megan Roman

The Court Jester (1956)

"The pellet in the poison's in... back? Will Walt's ego not allow him to sit idly by? We'll find out in October."

THE CHARGER TIMES | ARTS AND LEISURE

Freaks(1932)

Man falls for women. Woman does not return love. The principle that has been employed myriad times never fades away in cinema. Zzz...

Now imagine that man being a retail in a carnival and the woman a beautiful accordion. This is the premise on which the cult classic Freaks in built upon. The setting is a travelling circus of slope-eyed, "Gorgeous" Von Zipper at which the hero of the story, a man named Steve, must somehow find a woman to marry in order to inherit money and plans for the future.

Although some scenes are, well, grotesque, they hold interest. Performance and after both shooting and touching moments. For no matter how deformed the performers are the Milos sisters are smart at the time. Zip and Pop are absolutely adorable because they look out for one another. Thus, I proudly declare it a "5/5." Curiously, the film selected the perfect heroine: Von Zipper's masterpiece for the film. She is in love with him and plans to marry him. She has no other passions for him. Clear how heribal friends tell Steve of his future. futures, she becomes distraught. How far can he go without her on his side?

Modern Times(1936)

Because love of the physical is not lasting. But true love is complicated; hard to find, takes time to develop and does not fade with time, because it is love of the soul which is everlasting. Therefore, love at first sight is not true love, but instead an infatuation that will fade with time. That's a quote that comes to mind here. "True love is the ghost, which everyone talks about and few have seen." That is why I find it hard to take people who only believe in love at first sight seriously. Yes, I have known one or two. Please love wisely!

This is again merely an opinion, but 9 times out of 10 this theory will probably be proven to be true.

Stone Brewing Company: Part 1

By David Vail

Stone Brewing Company is one of the newest and most exciting trends to make its way into Huntsville. It's based out of Escondido, Calif. They have been around since 1996, but they made their way to the 10th largest craft brewery in the United States and the 7th largest overall. This is a hop-tastic revision, simply because they have so many good beers. This week, I'll be covering three of Stone's pilsner ales, and next week I'll cover some of their dark beers. Enjoy!

Pale Ale

This pale ale pours a reddish-brown color and has a sweet, malty aroma. It has an alcohol by volume of 4.4 percent. You get some sweet caramel notes from the malt, a hint amount of maltiness, and a solid hop bite with minimal citrus notes. It starts sweet and leaves a lightly lingering bitterness. It's not a bad dynamic.

IPA

This India pale ale pours a golden amber color and has a very happy and citrusy aroma. It has an ABV of 6.9 percent. This is a classic West coast style and it comes to flavors and hop character. The hops are intense, with that unique citrus presence, reminiscent of grapefruit. It's smooth and finishes bitter and dry, which is not a bad thing at all, but be warned that it will take over your palate and drown out other flavors you may be trying to enjoy, say from a tasty meal or fine tobacco.

Levitation Ale

This award-winning amber ale pours a beautiful orange/amber color and has an ABV of 4.7 percent. The aroma comes off mostly hoppy and fresh, but there is a bit more here. Though the taste is undeniably hoppy with some of that great bitter yet sweet citrus bite, it is packed to the brim with other flavors. Despite the mostly hoppy aroma, it manages to pack in a lot of solid malt punch. Every flavor is a bit of a punch to your palate honestly, but it's very smooth and not abrasive in mouthfeel. I like this beer a bit actually. If you want something intense, yet lower in alcohol and very drinkable, this is an awesome beer.
